FEBRUARY 5, 1756. [Numb. 1128.]

The SOUTH-CAROLINA Gazette.

LONDON, Nov. 20.

THE lords of the admiralty have given notice to all sea officers who are absent with leave, to return to England within 6 months; or they will forfeit all the half-pay that may be due to them.

London, Nov. 22. Yesterday one of the principal secretaries of state, signified to a right hon. gentleman in a very high post, that his majesty had no farther occasion for his service: To which the gentleman replied, that it was with great satisfaction to his conscience, and with all duty and affection to his majesty, that he obeyed his commands.

We are assured that the right hon. the earl of Egmont, is appointed pay master of the forces, in the room of the right hon. Mr. Pitt.

It is said, that the right hon. George Grenville, treasurer of the navy; and James Grenville, Esq; one of the lords of trade, have resigned their places.

London, Nov. 25. We are credibly inform'd, that at Portsmouth, Plymouth, and other sea ports, there are between 6 and 7000 French prisoners.

It is said, that an able civilian has found out a precedent to condemn both ships and cargoes in the commons, which if true, will give high spirits to the officers and seamen belonging to the royal navy, as well as to victuallers, alehouse keepers, Wapping-landladies, buyers of seamen's wages, prize money, and many &c's.

The account of the dreadful earthquake at Lisbon is variously reported; some say 100 000 of the inhabitants have perished, others 60,000; that two thirds of the city is swallowed up, and others one half.

The above news arriving yesterday about 'Change time, it struck such a general panic, that the merchants immediately withdrew, the 'Change shut up, and no business transacted; and a club of Lisbon merchants, who have been accustomed to meet at the Fountain tavern in Bartholomew-Lane, had no one person attended.

BOSTON, January 9

Yesterday arrived here Capt Inches from the harbour of Lisbon, which he left the 11th of Nov last; by whom we have the following circumstancial account of the late earthquake there, in a letter from an English merchant, dated Nov. 3. 1755.

"I SEND you a short but the best account I can of a dreadful calamity that has happened —In the morning of the 1st inst. about 3 quarters after 9 o'clock, (a finer, calmer or clearer day I never saw) being in the upper part of my house giving some directions to one of my servants, I observed the windows and floor of my room begin to tremble and shake very violently: The trembling and noise increasing very fast, I at last concluded it to be an earthquake, on which I flew to the stairs, and instantly to an open pav'd yard; there I found myself surrounded by my servants, and tho' we held by one another, the motion of the earth was so violent that we had the greatest difficulty to keep on our feet: This violent motion, accompanied with a most dreadful noise, continued gradually increasing for about 5 minutes, when I observed the walls and roof of my house to fall in; and, at the same time, all the houses round me: Upon which such a dust and smoke arose, that it quite deprived me of my senses for some time; when they returned, I concluded the whole city was in flames by fire from the bowels of the earth: When it began to clear away, my ears were stunned with most lamentable cries, from my own family and many people in the neighbourhood, who had fled to my yard, being the only open place near. In this situation we all remained on our knees, praying, better than 20 minutes, when we had a second shock, but not near so violent as the first: After that, I determined to escape into the country, or endeavour to get upon the water; my servants all opposed me, but at last one agreed to accompany me, and by climbing over ruins upon ruins, (passing every where dead bodies, others maimed, others with an arm lost, and some with their heads only free but yet alive,) we got to the skirts of the city; then my servant left me to pilot the others we he had left; but I have not heard of them since. About 1 o'clock, with others I joined in the way, we got into a boat, and sailed down the river as far as Alcantra, where we got on board an English ship.

On the water we had time to reflect, and observe the damage done; the king's palace was down, the custom house, the new key near it sunk, many churches, convents, and above half the palaces and houses; all the country covered with men, women, and children, running different ways; and all the open squares filled with people, most lamentably crying, shrieking, and praying to God. While procuring a boat, we had a third shock, which (tho' it did not appear so violent as the 2d) did more damage; for it threw down the houses whose foundations had been shaken by the 2 first —On board ship I learnt, that on the water they had felt violent effects, and observed on the shore the earth open and close in several places, in the fields they perceived the ground flung up as if done with shovels; the tide returned very quick both E. and W. and that every half hour, the river rose and fell in 3 minutes more than 12 feet, and so high as to float large large sunken ships in Bull bay, which were drove down the river, with prodigious quantities of timber, lumber, casks, &c. What greatly adds to this dismal catastrophe, a great conflagration ensued in several parts of the city, by the fires in the houses when they were thrown down, which being the case with almost every house, and no body attempting to stop it, may say 2 3ds of the city is already burnt, and that the remainder will not escape, for we have had a high wind ever since at N.E. and E. All the buildings from the bottom of Bull bay to the Campo de Lam, near the galleys, are consumed, and the whole heart of city, from Terriero de Passo to the Russia, appears as one furnace—nothing but smoke and flames appear. Thank God, it has not yet done any considerable damage among the shipping, which is the refuge of all or most of the strangers that are preserved. —Thousands of men, women, and children are destroyed and buried in the ruins; the Portuguese that escaped, lay in the open fields, without any cover, and I fear multitudes will perish for the want of provisions.—The dead lay exposed, no thought of burying them, all desolation!—My 'compting house, with all my papers, cash, chest, &c. sunk the first shock, Mr. Edward Broome and Mr. James Combibrune have by being situated near the river saved the most valuable part of their effects, Mr. Stubbs has saved his books and cash, and so has Mr. Buller, and likewise the house of Mayne, Burn and Mayne; but the house of Briftow, Ward and company have not saved the minutest trifle, nor have I heard of any other that has:—It is impossible to tell how many English families are missing, but it is certain numbers are.

The king and court were at Belem, and preserved by staying in the open fields; the palace of Bragarza, where all the king's jewels and treasure is kept, is burnt to the ground, and so is the patriarchal, where was all the rich plate; in short, I don't know that any place of consequence is saved, except the mint, where is the greatest part of the treasure brought by the 3 last fleets, that appears to be intire; but I saw no guard about it last night, so it's liable to be plundered by vagabonds and rogues, which are let out of the prison; such as have no dread on them of futurity, may be as rich with the spoils as they please; for they may load themselves, or boats, or even ships with the most valuable effects.—Having before told you you every houfe is abandoned, our chief concern is now to contrive how to fubfift, for no doubt that will be the next firft and greateft conſideration. I hear St. Ubes is wholly deſtroyed, and San Remo, Villa a Franca, and other towns up the river, are wholly ſwallowed up: Here ſince the 3 greateſt ſhocks, we have continued to feel many, and many ſhaker, and dread the worſt is not over:—The ſoldiers in the Bazia fort at the entrance of the bar, are all drowned, and it's ſuppoſed the bar is ſo ſhifted that it will be difficult for ſhips to come in, or go out. In ſhort, the whole country is totally ruined, and one century will not put things to rights, and I have no other expectation, than a total bankruptcy, and ſtagnation, which will affect, and greatly too, all trading places in Europe. Sir Henry Frankland, I am told eſcaped miraculouſly, he was in his chaiſe, and the moment he ſtept out, a houſe fell on it, and buried the chaiſe, beaſts and ſervants; he and lady are now at Belem: An embargo being laid on all ſhipping, I am now at the 6th of November, and have the pleaſure to tell you all my family are ſafe; but the mortification to add, that the fire has conſumed all the trading parts of the city, in which I am a ſufferer; for I ſhall not preſerve a ſingle paper, or any effects, tho' at the hazard of my life.— I have made ſeveral attempts, and as no method is taken to put a ſtop to it, the ruins that ſtill remain, will no doubt, be conſumed; however the entrance of the harbour is open, and ſeveral veſſels are arrived from different parts with proviſions, and his majeſty has given orders to tell the owners, that he will take the cargoes to diſtribute to the poor, and pay them a ſatisfactory profit:—He has likewiſe ſent troops and orders to all the inland places to bring ſupplies, ſo that at preſent we are in no want; but I fear, if conſiderable ſupplies do not come in from ſea, it will not long be the caſe. The greateſt part of our factory have eſcaped, and ſeem determined to go to England as faſt as they can find conveyances. No doubt whatever is ſent here will be ſold only for money; and the conſumption for fiſh, flour, corn, and ſuch commodities, will be very conſiderable:—We have every day one or more pretty violent ſhocks, ſo that no body chuſes to live in the few houſes that are left, and thouſands are in the open fields, without any tents or ought elſe to cover them: It is a great bleſſing the weather is mode ate and fair, if we ſhould have rain and cold, I fear more will periſh by that, than by the earthquake:—When you reflect on my preſent ſituation, I hope you will excuſe the incorrectneſs of this letter, for I have not time to peruſe it. " ——

By capt. Inches we learn, that from the firſt ſtruck on the firſt of November, they had ſeveral others ſucceſſively from day to day until the 8th, which cauſed a great trembling of his ſhip. He alſo informs, that the Engliſh church was the only one left ſtanding.
